Foundation seeks proposals from an experienced editor or news organization to coordinate an enterprising, statewide collaborative journalism project among Montana's newspapers. The Foundation and the project coordinator will identify key participants in the project, sound them out for potential enterprising topics, and create an inspiring dialogue to bring newsrooms together to determine the ultimate focus and the specific components of the project. With substantial input from collaborators, the Project Coordinator will ensure the project parameters and ultimate goals of the work are clearly defined and formally documented. The Project Coordinator will then oversee the collaborators' work, coordinating the collaborative efforts leading up to wide publication of the content created. The coordinator will produce regular progress reports for the Foundation and a final report summarizing the work completed and detailing the outcomes. BACKGROUND In October of 2017, the Solutions Journalism Network launched the Montana Gap Project, a collaborative effort among 12 Montana newsrooms that produced two feature packages of news content. The first package, published in January of 2018, consisted of 27 stories focused on rural economic development. The second package, published in July of 2018, included 16 stories highlighting mental health treatment. A follow-up survey of participating newsroom audiences showed that people who had read "Montana Gap" stories were "significantly more likely to say the trusted their local paper's coverage—and that the paper helped people get involved in community parameters established and clearly documented Nov. 1 - Mar. 31, 2020: Articles published Apr. 30, 2020: Final report to SJN, including recommendations, if any, on longer-term strategy PROPOSAL REQUIREMENTS Applicants should submit proposals to Montana Newspaper Association Executive Director Matt Gibson at mgibson@mtnewspapers.com by Friday, July 26, 2019. Proposals will be evaluated according to a combination of technical merit and a well-articulated understanding of the Foundation's aspirations. Proposals should include the following components:

- A summary of relevant experience, with a suggested emphasis on collaborative enterprise reporting
- Examples of previous work
- An articulate vision for solutions-oriented journalism
- A strategy for convening potential newsroom collaborators
- A strategy to promote the project's published content

Successful proposals should specify that the applicant meets the following criteria:

- 5 years + of producing, editing and publishing enterprising news content;
- Demonstrated ability to work collaboratively;
- Demonstrated capacity to fulfill role of project coordinator
- Access to and knowledge of all necessary software and equipment, including shared communication, word processing and spreadsheet applications.

BUDGET The Foundation has budgeted $27,000 for coordination of the project. Subgrants to collaborators would potentially provide additional financial resources over and above the project coordination budget. ETHICS The project coordinator will pledge to conduct the work in a professional and ethical manner at all times, including a commitment to truthfulness and accuracy. QUESTIONS Please submit any further questions to mgibson@mtnewspapers.com The Montana Newspaper Foundation will not pay for the development of proposals. Submission of a proposal implies no guarantee of subsequent use, and does not prejudice any future work undertaken by Montana Newspaper Foundation.
